1.0 Policy/Procedure

Bloodborne Pathogens

Employees who have occupational exposure to human blood, body fluid, pathogens, or body parts are required to receive training in work practices, methods of exposure and universal precautions. Employees exposed to blood or other body fluids should contact their supervisor or Department Director immediately. The Risk Management Specialist must also be immediately notified. All employees should practice strict adherence to the specified practices and procedures and use of personal protective equipment (PPE). Immediate washing of hands and contaminated areas of the body shall be implemented should an exposure to human blood, body fluid, or pathogens occur.
